

U. S. Senate Bill No. 2444, to prohibit radio and television advertising of distilled spirits for beverage purposes, is in hearing before the Senate Committee on Interstate & Foreign Commerce.

The American Association of Advertising Agencies has filed a statement with the senate committee opposing S-2444 as "unsound public policy" — and I think some of the paragraphs of their statement are noteworthy. For instance:

"We do not present this opinion on behalf of radio and television media, since it is the responsibility of advertising agencies in serving their clients to be impartial among all media.

"Nor do we hold any brief for distilled spirits. While there are agencies among our members which handle advertising for such products, there are also those which elect not to handle it.

"There is no advertising whatever by any distiller on any radio or television station or network within the continental United States."

The reasons for our opposition to S-2444 are these:

"First, there is no problem of any degree to warrant such a measure.

"Second, it would penalize rather than encourage the distilled spirits industry and the broadcasting industry for their honest and successful work at voluntary self-regulation; and it would discourage other industries in their similar efforts.

"Third, it would set a dangerous and unwise precedent by discriminating against a lawful industry, against advertising as a form of selling and against particular advertising media. If enacted, it could provide an entering wedge for groups which seek further discriminatory measures.

"Fourth, it would be a needless breach of a fundamental principle, that any product which is lawful under United States law to be sold may be legally advertised. Holding to this encouraging principle is vital to the national welfare, we believe; for the time is coming when business in general may need every encouragement to find customers, in order to maintain a high level of employment."

"So much for the AAAA statement.

You're a taxpayer, groaning under the already heavy burden of the withholding tax; and what are your lawmakers doing in Washington?

They're debating a bill to prohibit something that doesn't even exist! If they pass S-2444 then they'll be hiring another bureau and another parcel of agents to amuse themselves, perhaps forever, listening to pretty music on the radio and watching the Saturday afternoon football game on television!

And for this the American people skip their grocery bill to pay taxes!

Somewhere in this devious and dishonest mess you will find, as usual, the long and scrawny arm of the prohibition lobby — a legalistic treadmill which, the more you ply it with "moral law," the greater its production of public incompetence, immorality, and scandal.

How come this fact, which can't have escaped your notice, that with all the vast array of "moral lawmaking" in our time the cost of government has skyrocketed, while the quality of government has sunk so low that you'd take almost any citizen's word before that of your government?

How can you have a government any better than its people, and what kind of people are those Americans who have so little morality of their own that they are always rushing down to Washington to get a law passed so they'll have something to depend on, besides their conscience?

I never heard a whisky ad on the radio in my life. For that you have the distilled spirits industry, their advertising counselors, the radio networks and stations to thank.

And it's absolutely contemptible for the professional reformer crowd to come along now and try to claim credit for a worth-while work with a new law — and a new corruption.

13 Seamen Still Trying to Save Broken Tanker

Chatham, Mass., Feb. 20 (AP) — Thirteen weary seamen, true to the tradition of the seas, stuck it out today on the derelict stern of a broken tanker—hoping to salvage the hull.

Crewmen of the tanker Fort Mercer — torn in half by the winter's worst storm two days ago — passed up rescue last night. Twenty-five of their mates were taken off the wreck by coast guards.

Eighteen of them reached Boston this morning aboard the cutter Acushnet, while tugs and other cutters hovered around the bobbing wreckage mapping out salvage plans.

It was hoped the stern section could be towed to port but the vessel's owners in New York, The Trinidad Corporation, said a decision might be made today to sink it by gunfire. The Coast Guard had said the wreckage is a menace to navigation.

The Fort Mercer, loaded with oil, was wrecked on Feb. 18.

Crit Stuart Announces for Tax Assessor

Crit Stuart of Hope today announced as a candidate for Tax Assessor of Hempstead County, subject to the 1952 Democratic primary elections.

Mr. Stuart is a life long resident of Hempstead County. He was born and reared at Columbus and lived there for a number of years. Following that time he resided at Washington for sixteen years. For the past twelve years he has lived with his family at Hope.

It is one of the most important offices in the Courthouse, because all the revenue for the operation of the county government depends upon the proper functioning of the Assessor's office. Then too, it is important from the individual citizen's standpoint because each tax payer is entitled to have his or her property assessed for tax purposes in a fair and equal manner."

"If I am elected Tax Assessor I pledge only that I will treat every tax payer, in a fair, courteous and equal manner."

"I will deeply appreciate the vote and support of every good citizen of Hempstead County."

Prospects for Local Broiler Industry Seen

This is the nation's most favorable area for development of a broiler industry — and such an industry would answer the question of how to save today's vanishing marginal farm operations, two General Mills, Inc., representatives told a group of nine Hope men yesterday afternoon.

The conference, in advance of a public meeting of broiler producers here last night, was held in the offices of the Mid-South Cotton Growers association, South Walnut street. General Mills, Inc., was represented by R. J. Higgins, district manager, Hot Springs; and C. St. Gordon, territorial salesman, Conway.

Hope men present were: Jewel V. Moore, Jr., groceryman; A. E. Slusser, of Mid-South; L. B. Tooley of Radio Station KXAR; Ray Lawrence, secretary-manager of Hope Chamber of Commerce; C. C. Spraggins and Dale Jones, vice-president and cashier, respectively, of Citizens National Bank, Syd McMath and Thomas E. Hays, vice-president and cashier, respectively, of First National bank; and A. H. Washburn, Hope Star.

Higgins' Statement
Mr. Higgins, spokesman for General Mills, Inc., told the group:

"Our company's been in the broiler business 22 years, and we operate in all the 48 states. Your particular area has advantages because of mild weather and lesser housing requirements, and we see the broiler industry moving definitely toward the Southwest."

"Arkansas is third in broiler production in America, but Texas is crowding you. Center, Texas, a new and coming broiler-production area, is nearly identical to Hope."

"Except for broilers and livestock the marginal farmer is a thing of the past. Formerly he used to affect the general market on which agricultural production was sold — but not today. Today's markets belong to agricultural specialists, and that includes broiler specialists."

"You can't exist in the poultry business, any more than in some other business, without a sound program. It isn't a get-rich quick deal. You have to like chickens. There are plenty of market fluctuations, but the profit will average out."

Three Vital Factors
"There are three main factors in broiler success:

"1. The type of chick. It has to be fast-feathering, fast-growing — which means fast feed conversion."

"2. The type of poultry house. Types used only five years ago are obsolete today. You need to

Republicans Like Victory in New York

By The Associated Press
Republican leaders today hailed the election of Robert Tripp Ross as congressman in New York's Queens County as "the handwriting on the wall for the Truman administration."

This New York City District has chosen Democrats in three out of five elections in its eight-year history.

Ross, conducting his fourth campaign for the seat, ran on a strictly anti-Truman platform which he expounded to voters by direct mail, telephone and door-to-door calls. He had served in Congress from 1946 to 1948.

Loss of this first congressional race in a presidential election year cut the Democrats' margin in the House to 20 seats. The special election was held to fill the seat vacated by Democrat T. Vincent Quinn, who resigned to become Queens district attorney.

In Washington, Rep. Leonard W. Hall of New York, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, called Ross' victory "the handwriting on the wall for the Truman administration."

Chairman Guy George Gabrielson of the Republican National Committee said "this significant Republican victory in a Democratic stronghold, reflects the determination of voters everywhere to replace Trumanism with sound, honest government, competent to

Purchasing Vote Hearing Starts

Little Rock, Feb. 20 (AP) — Hearings on a suit aimed at stopping a public vote on the new state purchasing act may begin "around Feb. 28."

Commissioner Wayne Upton, appointed by the Arkansas Supreme Court to hear testimony in the case said yesterday that opposing attorneys have indicated that they hoped to be prepared by that date.

The suit alleges that petitions circulated by opponents of Act 242 of 1951 to refer it to the general election next November were voided by various frauds and irregularities. The suit was brought by two Little Rock taxpayers against Secretary of State C. G. Hall, who certified the petitions.

Opponents of the law, designed to alter state purchasing procedures, are led by John F. Wells, publisher of a weekly governmental digest here.

It Would Be Wonderful Indeed to Turn a Hobby Into a $10,000 a Year Business

By HAL BOYLE
Cape May, N. J., Feb. 20 (AP) — Why work for a living if you can make a living by playing?

The pleasure of finding they could turn a hobby into a business has been a real adventure in contentment for Ken and Marge Ewer.

They are the happy proprietors of the Cape May country store, a unique paradise for tinkers and people who like to buy things like old coffee grinders, cuspidors and beaver hats. It is also a thriving arts and handicrafts center.

For years Mr. Ewer was a successful, well-paid executive of a Midwest metals firm. But he had insomnia, wasn't really having any fun and fretted over whether he was saving enough money to pay for the ulcers he felt he was getting.

One night he and his wife talked it over and decided their way of life wasn't worth the worry.

"I thought before I started out paying out everything to the doctors we might as well do a little real living," Ken said.

So he quit his job and came to this resort center to rest.

"After three days of sitting in a rocking chair on the front porch I decided that wasn't living either," Ken recalled.

What could they do? He and his wife shaped a lifelong interest in antiques and handicrafts. They decided to make their hobby their career, to create a place where people who like to use their hands could work in peace and maybe turn a small profit too.

"I had always been a tinkerer," said Ken, "so I thought I'd set up a tinkers' headquarters where we could revive some of the old crafts that have been dying out."

They bought an old stable and slapped a coat of red paint on it. They began stocking the stable with thousands of antiques from the American past, from old shoe buttons to old horse collars. They make wonderful modern pieces the way they used to make them.

Judge R. F. Kennon

Kennon Smashes Long Regime in Louisiana

New Orleans, Feb. 20 (AP) — Robert F. Kennon, a 49-year-old county judge, overthrew the political might of Gov. Earl K. Long in a landslide victory for governor of Louisiana.

Kennon handed the Long forces their worst defeat since the late Huey P. (Kingfish) Long was beaten for governor in his first attempt in 1924.

Kennon's victory in yesterday's Democratic primary, equivalent to election, was over former state District Judge Carlos G. Spat (pronounced Spate) of Baton Rouge, whom Gov. Long hand-picked to be his successor. The state Constitution bars the governor from succeeding himself.

His four-year term expires in May. Unofficial returns from 1518 of the state's 2113 precincts early today showed:

Kennon 359,139
Spat 200,441

During his campaign Kennon spoke out strongly against renomination of President Truman. In an early morning interview today Kennon said, "I am going to make haste slowly on national affairs. I think the policy of the Democratic party in Louisiana should be to watch developments in other states."

Louisiana, along with Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina, cast their electoral votes in 1948 for the States' Rights ticket against the Democratic candidate.

The prime issue in the gubernatorial campaign was pro-Long vs. anti-Long, an issue dating back a quarter of a century to the days of the Louisiana Kingfish.

Kennon, from Minden in Northwest Louisiana, campaigned against the Long administration.

In the first primary, Jan. 15, he ran without the support of any major political organization or the endorsement of any daily newspaper.

Kennon and Spat topped a nine-candidate field with Spat in first place by 10,000 votes.

In yesterday's second runoff primary, Kennon was supported by a coalition of anti-Long forces including the even defeated candidates, the organization of Mayor LeSap, Morrison of New Orleans, the three New Orleans daily newspapers and other newspapers throughout the state.

Kennon promised Louisiana citizens, the heaviest taxed in the nation, he would eliminate governmental waste and reduce taxes.

Returns from other state races were not as complete as those in the governor's race but it appeared the Kennon ticket was elected — C. E. (Cap) Barham for lieutenant governor; Fred LeBlanc for attorney general; Allison Kolb for auditor and Mrs. Ellen Bryan Moore for register of the State Land Office.

Youths Shaken Up in Wreck Here

Chance to Get Material Cheap Is Taken

Thirteen city blocks in downtown Hope will be resurfaced with a 2 1/2 inch coat of asphalt at a cost of $14,613, it was voted last night by Hope City Council following a long discussion.

The council voted to pledge a portion of the money collected from parking meters to finance the paving. The meters average $400 weekly, and funds are used entirely for street improvements.

Taking part in the discussion were City Engineer C. O. Thomas who estimated the cost and Edgar Cargile, engineer for Tecon Construction Company who will be in charge of the project.

The decision was taken to pave the downtown area after it was established that the job would cost from two to three times as much if an asphalt plant had to be moved in. Asphalt for the paving will come from the plant on the High

In keeping with this project the group passed an ordinance setting up street improvement dist. No. 22 in the vicinity of C. V. Nunn, and other residents.

The most important work of the conference actually already had been done in London, where the Big Three foreign ministers worked out a compromise formula with West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer to bring West Germany into the projected Western Army.

Rearmed German units would fight in the European Army alongside contingents from France, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and Italy. The European Army in turn would join U. S., Canadian, British, Turkish, Greek, Portuguese, Norwegian, Danish and Icelandic forces under the supreme NATO Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

NATO is expected to give quick approval to this Big Three compromise formula for Western German participation in Europe's defense.

1. Joint sessions of the NATO and European Army councils whenever there is an emergency— a threat of attack to any member or whenever the integrity of either organization is menaced. Thus Germany, which is not a member of NATO, would have a say in any grave defense question concerning it. At the same time, France would have an indirect pledge of U. S. and British interest in any attempt to destroy the integrity of the European Army.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

FROM below Liddell could hear the stamp of heavy footsteps. He bolted the hall door, made for the bedroom. Inside, he closed the door after him, doused the light, headed for the window, raised it.

It was a relatively short drop to the square below. He slid a leg over the sill, caught on with his hands, dropped himself to the courtyard.

Above he could hear sounds of mounting commotion in the apartment he had just quitted. A light flashed on in the bedroom window and a hoarse voice shouted. Liddell made his way cautiously across the courtyard toward a door, apparently leading to an alley.

He had barely reached the courtyard door when a form was silhouetted at the window above. There was a shouted order to "Halt!" Liddell kept going, reached the door, opened it and slammed it shut behind him. There was a series of sharp snaps and ugly, jagged holes ripped through the wooden door. Liddell kept going.

At the far end of the alley, he came out into a street. A cab cruised by, stopped for his hall. Liddell gave an address on Central Park West, leaned back. From close by came the shriek and wail of sirens.

"Looks like there's plenty of excitement going on some place around here," the cabby grunted. "Either that or some flatie doing the late shift just don't want nobody else to sleep either."

Muggsy opened the door in response to his knock. She was wearing a close-fitting hostess gown of some shiny material. Her sleep-heavy eyes widened when she recognized Liddell. He slid by her, closed the door behind him.

Muggsy snatched automatically at her tumbled hair, followed him into the living room. "What time is it?" she demanded.

"Nearly six," Liddell told her. He dropped onto the sofa, jabbed gingerly at the sensitive spots on the top of his head.

"What's happened?" Muggsy wanted to know.

Liddell groaned. "I'm in a jam, baby. A real jam."

"Bad?"

Liddell grimaced blankly. "The works. Murder. He slid over, made room for her on the couch. "A beautiful picture with a frame to match and me sitting front row center."

Muggsy shook her head confusedly. "I guess I'm thick. You can't have a murder without someone being dead. Who is it?"

Both halves of the other tanker, The Pendleton, washed aground yesterday. The bow section of the Fort Mercer still floated in the sea some 20 miles from the stern. All crewmen had been rescued from those three sections.

One of the survivors of the Mercer's breakup said on reaching Boston the strength of the ship's bulkheads saved their lives.

"The bulkheads didn't collapse," Quartermaster H. W. Newman of Memphis, Tenn., said. "If a couple went we would have more likely foundered."

Another member of the crew, Thomas A. McCoy of Providence, R. I., a fireman and water tender, said the rescue by the Coast Guard was "the greatest demonstration of courageous seamanship I have ever seen."

Thirty of the 32 men rescued from the stern section of the Pendleton arrived in Boston yesterday and told their story of the disaster.

Steward Oliver Gendron of Chester, Pa., credited a game of pool with saving his life.

"It was after playing cards," he said, "when we heard the ship crack. If I had been in my usual spot at the bow I wouldn't be here now."

All the men who were in the bow of the Pendleton are listed as missing.

Wallace B. Quirey, 49, of Milburn, Okla., arrived in Boston clutching a brand new Bible in his hands.

Investment is too great. Besides, if he's going to utilize his investment and time to full efficiency he's got to lay out a production plan and stay with it. Every 9 or 10 weeks he starts another full batch of chicks—and then he knows that in 9 or 10 weeks he will have a pretty exact number of broilers for the market. "A 5,000-broiler unit is the minimum for a family which is going to depend on poultry as major part of the farm income. However, many folks may have to start smaller than that. But 5,000 is the immediate goal. And you raise four or even five broiler crops a year — usually four, which gives the farm family time off for vacation. A man and his wife with modern equipment can handle 20,000 broilers at a batch — 80,000 a year. "The profit range is wide. But you ought to try to average out around 10 cents per bird." Need Housing Credit The most serious handicap in launching a broiler business, Mr. Higgins continued, is the specific financing of poultry housing. Present financing arrangements in Arkansas are inadequate, he said. FHA credit is not well adapted to the poultry business, and General Mills, Inc., does not itself do any housing financing; it participates in broiler crop financing only, he continued. Mr. Higgins suggested that a local loan program be worked out to cover the broiler housing problem; and then he explained General Mills' participation with the dealers and the banks in the crop financing. "We've had only two losses in a million dollars' worth of loans," he said. Although no specific figures were available on the cost of poultry housing the discussion among the group revealed that one square foot of housing is required for each bird, and probably cost of housing and equipment combined would run around $1 per square foot — making a 5,000-broiler house cost around $5,000, complete. Housing without equipment might run as low as 50 cents per square foot, it was said. A questionnaire testing construction and production costs, and operating profit experience of Hempstead county farmers already in the broiler business — an estimated capacity of 80,000 birds per crop — is to be circulated among the producers, with the results to be studied later.

achieve peace and preserve our freedom.

In Louisiana, the forces of Gov. Earl Long were unseated by Robert Kennon, an appellate judge, who overwhelmed Long's hand-picked candidate for governor, Carlos Spahn, in a Democratic primary runoff. Long was ineligible to succeed himself.

The victory means actual election in solidly Democratic Louisiana.

Kennon, who campaigned as an independent, had the support of an anti-Long coalition forced by seven candidates who lost out in an earlier primary.

In the big race for the Republican presidential nomination, there were these developments:

1. Sen. Taft of Ohio said he welcomes Gov. Earl Warren of California into the April 1 Wisconsin primary. He added, "My only regret is that Gen. Eisenhower hasn't decided to come into the race."

2. Stassen said in Madison he believed the Wisconsin primary still was a contest between himself and Taft despite Warren's entry. He said in an interview he believed neither Eisenhower nor Gen. Douglas MacArthur would permit his name to be entered. Stassen said he welcomed support from the two generals' backers.

3. Sen. Morse (R-Ore), an Eisenhower supporter, said he would like to see the general entered in Wisconsin. He added, "If a man is holding himself out for the presidency, he ought to be willing to run in every primary."

4. Morse did not rule out the possibility he might run as a "favorite son" in his home state but said Taft should run in the Oregon primary.

5. Petitions were filed putting MacArthur's name in the Oregon primary. Meanwhile, MacArthur asked that his name be withdrawn from the Minnesota primary March 18 and the Pennsylvania primary April 22. But the general's backers said they might go to court to keep his name on the Pennsylvania ballot.

On the Democratic side, W. Averell Harriman was mentioned as a possibility on the party's ticket. Paul A. Fitzpatrick, New York State Democratic chairman, wasn't specific in mentioning the 60-year-old diplomat's name after a White House visit yesterday. But he indicated Harriman was being considered for either the vice presidency or a senate seat.

Sen. Board and the Little Rock Council on Schools had been scheduled for today, but Dr. Edwin W. Orrison, board secretary, said a quorum of board members could not be gathered.

GOP Victory in New York Seen as Omen

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—GOP leaders saw an anti-Truman omen today as a Republican won a Democratic House seat in the first congressional election of this presidential year.

Former Republican Congressman Robert Tripp Ross polled 17,300 votes yesterday to 11,442 for Democratic City Councilman H. J. Quinn.

The special election to fill a vacant seat was held in New York state's Fifth Congressional District, composing part of the New York City Borough of Queens.

Hailing Ross' 5,858 margin of victory, Republican National Chairman Guy George Gabrielson said Washington:

"This significant Republican victory in a Democrat stronghold reflects the determination of voters everywhere to replace Truman with sound, honest government, competent to achieve peace and preserve our freedoms."

The Fifth District—laid out in 1944—elected a Democratic congressman three out of four times before yesterday's election.

Election of Ross made the House of Representatives kneep 230 Democrats to 202 Republicans. There is one independent representative and there are two vacancies.

PIN-WORMS MAY BE A FAMILY AFFAIR

Fidgeting, nose-picking and a tormenting fecal itch are often tell-tale signs of Pin-Worms... tiny parasites that medical experts say infect one out of every three persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, these pests must not only be killed, but killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do... and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredients cross right to work—kill Pin-Worms quickly and easily.

Don't take chances with this dangerous, highly contagious condition. At the first sign of Pin-Worms, ask your druggist for genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge... the small, easy-to-take tablets perfected by Dr. J. C. Jayne & Son, spec. in worm remedies for over 100 years.

NOTICE To Owners of Livestock

It is a violation of the criminal law for any livestock to run at large in Hempstead County, Arkansas. Many complaints have been made to me this winter about livestock, especially hogs, running at large, annoying neighbors, damaging pastures and otherwise injuring property.

I urge all persons to keep up their livestock and to fix their fences, if livestock have been breaking out.

DOROTHY DIX Keep Standards High

Dear Miss Dix: Two years ago I met the man of my dreams. He took me out occasionally but never said I meant anything to him. A year ago he joined the Army and began to write to me. His letters were just friendly. When he came home on leave he saw me a few times, then the last night he was home he got fresh for the first time. I told him if he thought I was that type of girl he'd better just forget about me. About a week later I received a letter from him which was quite different from all the others, and ever since they have been more serious. My problem is this: Does he mean all the things he writes or are they just words without meaning? Do you think he could have fallen in love with me?

CAROLYN
Answer: I hope your letter serves as a beacon to the girls who believe they must respond to a boy's overtures to keep his regard. They are so wrong, as your typical experience shows.

A boy who is out for an evening of fun will often make advances to a girl just to see what happens. The right kind of girl repulses the love-making and automatically wins the boy's respect. If he's serious, he'll call again with a more gentlemanly attitude.

He's Serious
Such is the progress of your case. You can be quite sure that this boy is falling in love with you, and that he does mean the serious tones of his letters. Even young boys can recognize the high calibre of a girl with self-respect. A girl of high ideals, who sets a standard for boy friends, may not have male companions falling over themselves to have dates with her, but she will be assured that those who do seek her friendship are worthy of it.

Dear Miss Dix: A friend of mine has many chances to go out on dates but she always refuses because she has no place to bring her friends. Her home consists of two bedrooms and a kitchen—no parlor. Would it be okay for her to bring them into the kitchen, or would the young men object?

KITTY
Answer: While it is unfortunate to be so restricted on entertainment quarters, many dwellers in small apartments are in the same predicament. There is nothing wrong in asking a young man into a kitchen and few of them will object. In fact, most young men are delighted to be so near the source of food.

Perhaps your friend could transform one of the bedrooms into a bed-sitting room? Such a change can be made with remarkably little money and effort. A roomy couch to take the place of the bed, dressers that can easily double as living-room chests, and an attractive room is available for entertaining. Women's magazines will give many hints for such a room.

Dear Miss Dix: My daughter is married to a man eight years older than she. They have been married four years and have a 2-year-old son. They lived with me for three years and moved away two months ago. Her husband is a mamma's boy, and stops to see his mother every day. Yet he fights with my daughter if she wants to come here once in ten days.

MILDRED
Answer: A wife is entitled to see her mother as often as a husband sees his. She may, and probably will, have to do some arguing to win this point, but unless she takes a stand and fights for her rights, there will be constant squabbling over a very important matter. Talk a little backbone into your daughter. You'll probably be accused of being an interfering mother-in-law for your pains, but certainly she is entitled to see her mother once to the ten times her husband goes home to mamma.

District Junior Cage Play Opens Here

Four Teams Advance in Opening Round

First round play in District 7-W Junior boys tournament got underway here last night with Genoa, Arkadelphia, Laneburg and Delight advancing.

Coach Joe Esslinger said today that all Junior tournament games to be played Thursday night have been moved up to Thursday afternoon starting at 1 o'clock. Friday afternoon games will be played Thursday night.

Genoa got off to a bad start but pulled ahead in the third period to defeat Stamps 35 to 29. Hensley with 13, Purifoy with 9, led the winners while Willis and McDonald made 8 each for the Stamps boys. Arkadelphia didn't have much trouble defeating a much smaller team 51 to 16. Baker scored 16 and Bippus 13 for the winners. Laneburg edged Fouke 25 to 27 but it took an overtime period to do it. The regular game was close all the way, ending in a 22-all-knock. Fouke's Griffith tossed in 12 points while Ellis and Miller made 16 each for the winners. Fouke whipped in two quick field goals to take the overtime lead but the Nevada Countians countered with a couple of gifts and two shots from the court to win.

In the night final game Delight started and ended fast to down Ashdown 35 to 27. Ashdown Faulkner 21 points was tops. McDowell dunked in 11 for Delight.

Tech Has State Title Sewed Up

By The Associated Press
Arkansas Tech, with the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference basketball championship already in its pocket, continues to maul league opponents.

Last night, Coach Sam Hindman's Wonder Boys whipped third-ranked Southern State College 66-61. It was Tech's 17th conference victory against a single defeat.

Arkansas State Teachers, riding in second place and holder of the lone victory over Tech, trounced lowly Henderson 75-61 and Hendrix College of Conway humbled equally-dwelling Ouachita 75-57.

The games did not alter league standings.

There's still a premium on second, third and fourth spots. Those teams and Tech will compete in a playoff to determine the state's representative to the National Association of Intercollegiate Basketball (NAIB) Tournament.

In the individual scoring race, Arkansas College Center Henry Neff took over the total points lead with 318 points in 17 games. Mandel Whitely of Little Rock Junior College was second with 315 points in only 14 games, and Boyd Miller of Arkansas A. & M. is third with 314 points in 13 games.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—This had to come, and the only wonder is that it didn't come sooner. Pennsylvania produces more top football stars than any state in the union. Texas incubates the greatest golfers and California spawns the tennis immortals. But which state is the basketball capital?

For a great many years we have had the impression that Indiana held valid claim to that distinction. For some reason we were told, the Hoosier youth started playing the game younger, played it better and were cheered on by a more frenzied set of basketball fans than those of any other section of the nation.

An old friend, a successful coach, once told us of how, just out of a freshwater college, he had accepted a bid to coach the high school team of an Indiana village. When he dropped off the train he discovered to his dismay that it wasn't much better than a crossroads.

"But, pal, when I started in trying to coach those kids I discovered they knew more about basketball than I did," he would recall.

"It was an embarrassing situation. And the first night we drove off across the fields to play a game, there, right smack in the middle of nowhere, was the biggest doggone basketball arena I had ever seen. Cars and buggies and wagons were parked for a half-mile around and they had closed the doors long before we got there."

Having thus been fed on the wonders of Indiana basketball, it was with a certain sense of shock that we opened a recent copy of the New York News to read in Jimmy Powers' column that the cream of the nation's eagles are born right here within dribbling distance.

Powers then proceeded to reel off a list of names to dazzle the mind — Bobbitt, Gorkin, Farnham, Garfinkel, Schectman, Bukko, Zawoluk, Zaslofsky. Bender and numerous others he wondered if any 20 Indiana high schools and produced as many authentic stars as one in New York City, Thomas Jefferson.

The thought occurred at the time that Indiana almost certainly wouldn't take talk like that sitting down, and sure enough it didn't. Bob Stranahan of the Indianapolis Star comes snarling back with an entire column designed to prove that a "big city fellow by the name of Powers" should be tested for the feeble.

Stranahan responds with a list longer than Powers' — all Indiana boys who have left their imprint indelibly upon the cage world. He is equally boiled at Jimmy for having spelled James Whitcomb Riley's name "Reiley."

"Maybe your New York readers will swallow it," he said but Hoosiers like Riley spelled Riley and their basketball played Indiana style."

Stranahan points out that last year's Associated Press All-American teams contained three Indiana players — Sam Ranzino of N. C. State, Clyde Lovellette of Kansas and Bill Garrett of Indiana U. "That's three out of 15," he comments, "and how many did New York have? I can't find anyone except Bob Zaqluk of St. Johns."

Leaving Powers and Stranahan to duel it out for the time being, is there any other state in position to stake a claim? Kentucky maybe, or Illinois? In hopes of finding a clue, we looked up last season's all-star team of the National Professional Association, the game's biggest apple. The five picks were natives respectively of Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Kentucky. Indiana placed one on the second team, New York two.

The Deep South, the Southwest, and the Far West have produced far more than their share of big league baseball greats, but for some reason that easily answered have come up only rarely with a basketball star of first magnitude.

Fair Enough

Berlin — In a seven-story office building, formerly the business headquarters of the great Siemens and Halske Electrical works in the British sector of Berlin, two hundred boys, waifs of the war and most of them from the Russian zone, are living in a sort of boys' town run by Father August Klinski, a Catholic priest who has moonched and scrounged to keep his flock together down to now.

It is irresistible to deal in comparisons in Berlin. These lost children are much better off than many others. They get enough to eat. There are five sisters of the order of nuns to look after them and do for them and eight priests supervise their education and their moral training. They are learning to be carpenters, shoemakers, book binders, priests.

Life is bleak in an orphanage and this old building is dark and shadowy and naked of amenities. The elevator has broken down and Siemens and Halske will not fix it for a rent of 3,200 marks a month. Yet there are outdoor flag poles in old bomb shelters in Berlin whose condition is worse. The infant mortality in Berlin is 42 per thousand and these families in the bomb shelters are heavy contributors to this awful total. There are 4,000 doctors in Berlin, many of whom are out of practice, some driving taxicabs and trams.

The whole community in the American, British and French sectors, indeed the whole western zone of Germany, dwells under an imminent threat of a sudden attack of the Russian soldiers who were turned loose to rape, loot and burn when by mysterious treaty not yet honestly revealed to the American people, the city was yielded exclusively to F. D. Roosevelt's trusted friend, Josef Stalin.

If you shudder at the darkness of the future of these orphans, you thoughts quickly remind you that many fine American women and their children are living right under the gun, complaining with the government's policy of keeping high the spirits of more than two million German civilians in the Allied sectors of Berlin. Several American women have been reported against the suggestion that they are hostages and that if the worst should happen they and the children would become a horrible sacrifice to a political folly. One of them said "I know what I am doing and women can be of service. In fact, I am the duty officer in this office today."

They get angry at reminders that there is no need for the services of women in armies or in war zones if we make honest use of our manpower. Here they are and here they insist that they will stay in a city where unknown, uncounted dead still lie buried in great ruins, where the work of derelicting is a leading occupation with a calculated risk that a pick will jab the nerve of a live bomb.

Ever since 1945 I had heard occasional glimpses of the experiences and works of Sister Mary Angelina in this helm named for Father Bonas, an Italian priest who ran a boys town in Italy a hundred years ago. Sister Mary Angelina has a sister in New York whose earnings almost to the last dollar go into this orphanage and the proposition is not that the boys are so bad off now but that they were homeless strays wandering in the ruins like alley cats when they were taken in. Some of the kids had had thorough schooling in the ways of a lawless world in ruin and are still showing a stout resistance to good manners and Christian morals.

Sister Mary Angelina, the sister superior of the helm, is a tiny woman with those apple cheeks which are characteristic in Germany. Her eyes, shadowed by a deep bonnet, are strangely gay when she drops the narrative of her ordeal—the Russians kicked eighty nuns out of a German military hospital in Silesia in one hour and set them adrift on the road. Tiny as she is, weighing not more than 100 pounds, she says she was struck and some of the sisters were raped and some burned alive. There were 3,000 German wounded in one hospital who were thrown out to die in the streets in days that followed. Nuns were to work dragging bodies to graves for burial.

This is not intended to be an atrocity story. There has been too much stuff from the German side and the instinctive retort to balance these horrors against Chau and Belsen, yet we can very well absorb inhuman conditions and ignore such treatment of nursing wounded men and practical slaughter of the patients in their care. It is endless, less and fruitless, but these stories suggest why the Russians will never let American correspondents or military observers cover their advances.

The amazing Sister Mary Angelina runs up and down the stairs of the old office building as lightly as any of the boys. Heavily breathless, I followed her to Father Klinski's office as she babbled the friends of her sister had come. She went away and reappeared with a large pot of coffee, a tureen of five dollars a pound, which had come, as it always does from the good provider in New York. Yet she brought no cup herself and would not until a priest put his invitation as an order.

The helm gets a little over a dollar a day for each boy from the city and the charity association but in a religious collective it is a long way, especially under management of a master scrounger. Father Klinski scrounged hospital beds in the dormitory, scrounged clothing and shoes, the master scrounger of all was triumph in the matter of the dining. Father Klinski fell in day with a Captain Brown of American army and by night Captain Brown had declared mattresses and an appropriate complement of gray blankets sheets to be surplus, and the helm was an institution ready to go.

Funds Asked for Mississippi Valley

Washington, Feb. 19 (AP)—A 7-state delegation is scheduled to appear before a House Appropriations subcommittee Monday in support of funds for the Lower Mississippi Valley flood control project.

The group will represent the Mississippi Valley Flood Control Association.

President Truman, in his budget, recommended appropriation of $60,025,000 this year for the project, which includes work on the Mississippi and its principal tributaries from Cairo, Ill., south to the Gulf of Mexico.

Last year Congress allowed $6.5 million dollars for the project.

Brig. Gen. P. A. Feringa, president of the Mississippi River Commission, recently told the subcommittee his office had recommended a total appropriation of $119,238,786 for the Lower Mississippi for the year starting July 1, but that the budget bureau had trimmed this to $60,025,000.

The delegation will include J. G. Burke, Helena, Ark., and W. G. Huxtable, West Memphis, Ark.

Rep. Passman (D-La., a member of the House Appropriations Committee, is president of the Mississippi Valley Association. Senator McClellan (D-Ark.) is vice president.

Gathings in Poll on Major Problems

Washington, Feb. 19 (AP)—An Arkansas member of Congress is polling his constituents on some of the major problems facing Congress and the country today.

He is Rep. Gathings of the First Arkansas District, which is in the northeastern part of the state.

Gathings, in radio talks and in 100 ballots sent to his district asking his constituents to indicate their views on 10 questions such as universal military training, cutting defense spending and the Korean War.

If he gets a good response, he told a reporter, he will sample the views of his district on other questions.

Gathings said he plans to place the results of his first poll in the Congressional Record so other members of Congress may see how residents of a south-central district feel on some of the questions of the day.

Also, he said, he'll use the results for his own guidance.

"Of course," he said, "I've already taken a stand on some of the questions. On these I hope the district upholds my view. If it doesn't, then I'll have to try and sell my viewpoint."

The questions which Gathings is asking his constituents:

Do you favor universal military training? Would you favor supporting an invasion of China by Chinese Nationalist forces? Do you favor American expenditures abroad for the development of backward nations — the so-called Point 4 program? Are you in favor of the Brannan Plan for direct subsidies to farmers for perishable commodities? Are you in favor of the economic recovery program which is the Marshall Plan? Do you favor a compulsory national health program? Are you in favor of federal aid to education? Do you favor cutting President Truman's budget for defense and military purposes?

State Guardsmen Being Processed

Ft. Smith, Feb. 19 (AP)—The last large group of Arkansas National Guardsmen returning from Korea was being processed at Camp Chaffee today for 30-day rotation furloughs.

Most of the 246 soldiers who arrived here from the Far East yesterday were members of the 938th Field Artillery Battalion. They left Japan Feb. 1.

Pennsylvania Ticket Carries Three Names

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 19 (AP)—The names of Harold E. Stassen, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Gen. Douglas MacArthur have been entered in the Pennsylvania presidential preference primary.

There is still time for any of the three to withdraw from the April 22 race.

No names at all were entered on the Democratic ticket. A recent State Democratic Policy Committee statement was issued supporting President Truman but withholding his entry in the primary.

None of the three whose names will appear on the GOP ballot signed the petitions submitted just before yesterday's deadline. Such signatures are not required by state law.

The result of the presidential preference ballot in this state is not binding upon delegates to the two major national party conventions. The state has 70 votes at each.

Edwin F. Russell, Harrisburg publisher and chairman of the Pennsylvania Citizens for Eisenhower.

"It is disappointing to find that Sen. Taft has not entered his name," Russell said in a statement.

"There certainly is no better testing ground of public opinion than here. Pennsylvania offers the most important preferential primary in the country."

Taft said in Washington that some petitions were circulated in his behalf but were not filed. He said he does not have time to make a state-wide campaign here because of commitments elsewhere.

The petitions for Stassen, former Minnesota governor and now president-on-leave of the University of Pennsylvania, were filed by aides of his friend Jay Cooke, Philadelphia financier.

MacArthur's petitions were filed by John G. Davis, state chairman of the MacArthur-for-President forces.

A spokesman for MacArthur said in New York that the general's statement that he is "not a candidate" remains unchanged.

Faint luminous clouds of dust and gas, hanging in space between the stars of the Milky Way, are being revealed for the first time in the "sky survey" photographs being taken at Palomar Observatory in California.

Flying Discs Showing Up in Korea

Washington, Feb. 19 (UP)—The Air Force disclosed today that objects resembling "flying discs" have been sighted over Korea by crew members of two U. S. bombers.

Top officials have ordered a full investigation of the reports, which came through regular military intelligence channels.

A spokesman said the objects were described by four eyewitnesses as globe-shaped, bright orange in color, and emitting an occasional flash of bluish light.

He indicated that several were sighted, but did not give the number.

The Air Force, which has thrown cold water on hundreds of previous "flying saucer" stories, apparently was impressed by the circumstances under which the new sightings were reported by its own personnel.

The first report reached Air Force intelligence officers from two crew members of a B-29 Superfortress who said they saw the objects flying parallel to their plane at about midnight on the night of Jan. 29. The plane was over Wonsan, Korea, at the time.

This report might have been discounted as over-imaginative. But on the same night, a B-29 from a different squadron returned to its base after a flight over Suncheon, Korea, a considerable distance from Wonsan. Two crew members told intelligence officers that they had seen "flying discs" moving parallel to their plane at a high altitude.
